A WOMAN'S LOT.

I school my face to act its part;
My heart I will not bare;
I would not have you read my soul
And see your image there.
Our ways in life may never meet—
Ah me! it is a woman's lot
To bear the pain as best she may,
So that the world suspect it not.
Then do not deem us proud and cold,
We women need to act a part;
The coldest face, the proudest mien
Full often hides the warmest heart.
And if we seem too free and gay,
Like butterflies as light as air,
You curl your lips in lordly pride,
And say that we're as false as fair.
When first we love we seldom wed,
And oftentimes feel too weak
To go our weary way alone;
And failing then of what we seek—
Despairing oft of what we would,
Our weary lives and hearts atrist,
We take our fate upon ourselves,
And drain the cup that's offered first.
Then blame us not if we're too cold,
Or yet too gay or light as air;
Remember, ye who frown us down,
A woman's lot is hard to bear.

WHITE PINE.

By our exchanges we every week receive accounts of the great richness of the mines at White Pine. This region is, no doubt, all that it is represented, as we have seen reports written by men of high standing and scrupulous integrity, which pronounce the wealth of this region in terms that appear fabulous and extravagant. The following is an extract from a letter to the San Jose Mercury:

"We visited the Eberhardt on Monday, having first obtained a permit from one of the owners at Austin. All that has been written concerning the wealth of this mine, we find more than realized. For a distance of 184 feet there is a mass of horn silver and chloride ore, much of which will work one-half its weight in pure silver, and some even as high as two-thirds. This may seem like a fabulous statement, but it is nevertheless true.

"They commenced taking out pay ore in May last, since when they have taken out over a million of dollars. The mine seems inexhaustible; and yet there are hundreds of locations in the same hill which give as fair promise as did the Eberhardt eight months ago. The Superintendent gave us a two pound specimen which contains over a pound of pure silver."

Another exchange, the Dispatch, speaks of A BUSH TO WHITE PINE:

"A private letter from Chicago states that up to the 15th of February, the Railroad Company had sold ten thousand tickets, for passengers to White Pine, to be transported during the month of March. There will doubtless be an immense influx of Eastern people as soon as spring opens."

Again, accounts from White Pine speak of INTENSE GOLD.

"At White Pine, on Sunday, February 23d, a man named Van Winkle was frozen, under the following circumstances: He was running a sleigh for passengers, between Hamilton and Treasure City, and during Sunday he drank to excess. He left Hamilton in the afternoon without any passengers, and it is supposed that he fell asleep and froze. The team took the sleigh to Treasure City in which the driver was found stiff and cold."

The Austin Reveille of Feb 20th speaks of NEW DISCOVERIES:

We conversed with a person yesterday who saw at White Pine, several of the men of a party which had returned from a prospecting trip to the eastward, bringing specimens of silver ore and a very meagre description of the country. Our informant states that the ore is chloride of a superior quality, and the prospectors said that it occurred in great quantity. Their explorations were cut short by a severe snow storm, and they were compelled to abandon the place in haste, but they intend to return with the first approach of Summer. Of course the prospectors did not give an accurate account of the locality where they made the discoveries, and only stated generally, that it was near Eagan Cañon, or about sixty-five miles east of Hamilton, White Pine. There are several organized districts in that direction which were discovered years ago. The Hercules district is situated in the Eagan range of mountains, about 160 miles nearly east from Austin, and bordering on the fine and extensive Steptoe valley. Many veins or deposits of silver ore were reported to exist in the district, and were reported by the discoverers. It was also said that copper ore occurred in the limestone in some parts of the district. All the prospectors that visited this section united in saying that Steptoe Valley, with its numerous water streams and lush meadow land, is the garden spot of Nevada. Further southward, and lying directly on the route from Pahrangat to White Pine, is the Robinson district, which is said to exhibit extraordinary peculiarities in its mineral occurrences. Copper, silver, lead and gold ores were reported as abundant. There are entire hills apparently of copper ore, and there are distinct veins of fluor spar in which occur cubes of galena. We have seen specimens of the silver bearing ore reported to be from the Robinson district, which were of excellent quality. About 170 miles east from Austin lies the district of Eagan, or Gold Cañon, as it is sometimes called, from the occurrence of gold in the quartz. It was discovered in 1863, is very accessible and well supplied with wood and water; but outside of the property of the Social and Steptoe Company there is very little development in the district. The Kinsley district is situated in the Antelope range of mountains forty miles north-east of Eagle Cañon and 200 miles from Austin, on the eastern border of the State. The peculiarity of the district is in the many massive veins of copper bearing ore. Samples of this ore taken from the surface are represented to have yielded by assay, from $60 to $100 per ton in silver. We believe the Central Pacific railroad will pass through the Kinsley district. Directly south of White Pine, and in the same range of mountains, are the lately discovered districts of Grant and Troy, in both of which fine silver ore has been discovered. In this vicinity in a radius of 60 miles, there is a plexus of veins and deposits of silver ore of immense value, which will reward the labor of the prospector who may fail to secure anything in the overcrowded White Pine. Possibly the reported new discoveries may be in some of the districts we have mentioned, or they may be original and in the same direction.

A Big Shooting Scrape.

We learn that a conflict occurred at Webb's ranch, on stony creek, Colusa county, on the 14th inst., which probably originated from the Pond murder. It will be remembered that S. W. Webb and William Webb were arrested about a month ago on the charge of murdering B. F. Pond, a neighbor, and who, it was said, had jumped a piece of Webb's land. The examination was held at Colusa, and the Webbs were discharged. As we understood the story as related to us, the Webbs returned to their ranch on the 14th inst., where, before they could enter the house, a party of armed men numbering from twelve to sixteen, opened fire upon them. The Webbs, however, soon found refuge in their house, (a log cabin) which afforded ample protection from rifle balls. An attempt was made to burn them out by firing a barn or granary, which stood so near that it was anticipated that the fire would communicate and destroy the house. The assailants were, however, mistaken, as the log cabin proved a salamander and withstood the heat. We are told that the Webbs remained under surveillance, day and night, until the night of the 17th, when they passed between the sentinels on duty and escaped, leaving Mrs Webb and a young son in possession of the cabin.

During these days a large number of shots were fired at the Webbs, but it seems that none of them took effect. We did not learn whether the Webbs returned the fire of their assailants, or other particulars that we have given. It seems an unfortunate quarrel, and one likely to terminate fatally to parties on one side or the other. This murderous assault upon the Webbs is certainly an outrage which cannot be justifiable under any circumstances, and must be denounced by all citizens in favor of law and order. Every law abiding citizen will concur with us if the circumstances as related prove to be correct.—Marysville Appeal.

Ann Swann, the nine feet high giantess, in a yellow dress and black velvet cloak, swept majestically down Broadway yesterday, looking in at the second story windows, she is as graceful as a swan and seems to enjoy good health, notwithstanding the partial roasting she got at Barnum's Museum. She went to get her picture taken. Of course it was not full length.—[The City N. Y.]

Late Eastern News.

[From files of the Daily New Mexican.]

The Herald says that General Van Allen arrived at Washington and had a conversation with Grant on Cuban affairs. Van Allen is the bearer of important dispatches from the revolutionists, and is charged by them with the work of laying the true state of affairs in Cuba before Congress and the President elect. Grant expressed himself strongly in favor of recognizing Cuban independence, and said that Spain did us serious wrong during the war, by protecting and harboring privateers and blockade runners.

Late Mexican dates received at San Francisco report that the escape of Gen Conto while being conveyed to Durango is untrue. He arrived at Durango on the 8th of January, and was immediately consigned to the tribunal which decides his fate.

Negrete was at Pueblo with 400 men for the purpose of capturing a conducta with three million of dollars in specie but fled on the approach of government troops.

The national guard established throughout the States of Sinaloa and Sonora, has done excellent service against the Apache Indians on the frontiers.

Rich gold diggings have been discovered near Todas Santas, in Lower California.

General Gutierrez, the chief of a large band of robbers, was kidnapped at Durango and delivered over to the authorities of the State. He offered to bribe his guards with sixty-four thousand dollars but unsuccessfully.

It is said that Grant did not resign his office as General of the Army as he considered the office expired on his inauguration as President. In reply to a committee of Republican representatives from the Southern States, Grant said there would be a change of military commanders throughout. In reply to a question whether Sheridan would be sent to New Orleans, he said not now; owing to the condition of Indian affairs on the frontier he had ordered him to pursue the Indians.

A Denver dispatches of March 3d, says we have it from a perfectly reliable source that Wells, Fargo & Company, mail contractors, will shorten their line to Cheyenne transferring it to the route of the Pacific and Denver railroad as soon as that road reaches the Platt crossing. When the railroad reaches Denver they will stock a daily line to Santa Fe, Albuquerque and El Paso, with a freight line to Elizabethtown, Tucson and other points.

The U. S. branch mint in Denver turned out in January and February one hundred and forty bars of gold valued at $98,164 and thirty bars of silver valued at $9,611, an increase of nearly fifty per cent. over the business of last year for the same period.

Washington, March —In the Senate Mr. colfax said: In entering upon the duties of this chamber to the performance of which I have been called by the people of the United States, I realize fully the delicacy as well as the responsibility of the position of presiding officer over a body whose members are in so large a degree my seniors by age. Not being chosen by that body itself I shall certainly need their assistance, support, generous forbearance and confidence, pledging to all a faithful and inflexible impartiality in the administration of rules, and earnestly desiring to operate with you in making the deliberations of the Senate worthy not only of its history, but also of the States whose commissions you hold. I am ready to take the oath. The oath was then administered by Chief Justice Chase.

It is estimated that 15,000 people visited Washington to attend the inauguration.

Ex-President Johnson on the night of the 3d signed the pardon of Arnold and Spangler. The Senate confirmed Wm. C. Powell as U. S. District Attorney for Arizona.

Daniel Pratt "the great American traveler," and irrepressible spouter on woman's rights conventions, is just now keeping Providence on a grin. He sung "Boll on, Silver Moon," the other night, the audience joining in the chorus with immense gusto.
